

Is a 10W Lixada a good solar charger?

It claims to be a 10W solar charger, but realistically only is 5W. Even in direct sunlight, you probably won't get more than 3.5W out of it. If you keep that in mind and primarily use it in sunny climates, then it is a great solar panel for backpacking. Like the other 10W Lixada, it also doesn't have auto-reset or blocking diodes, but is very cheap.

Is Voltaic Arc 10W a good solar charger?

Specs: The Voltaic Arc 10W solar charger seems fantastic at first glance. The watts-per-ounce is good and it's a nice compact size. In clear skies and bright sun, the charging is actually very good. But, as soon as the weather gets a bit cloudy, the performance on the Arc 10W charger gets VERY slow.

Is Lixada a good solar charger for backpacking?

Lixada also makes this UL solar charger that weighs just 2.8oz. It claims to be a 10W solar charger, but realistically only is 5W. Even in direct sunlight, you probably won't get more than 3.5W out of it. If you keep that in mind and primarily use it in sunny climates, then it is a great solar panel for backpacking.

Verdict: Still the best camping solar panel but has a very high price-per-watt
