8000W is a big unit. I would hesitate to buy such a large unit unless I really needed that much capacity. For emergency use, it is my personal plan and preference to back up only the minimum (house lights, electronics, etc.) and for the most part use non-electric backups (or none at all) for high draw applications such as cooking, air conditioning, clothes drying, etc.

A solar inverter is a magical device that converts the direct current (DC) produced by your solar panels into the alternating current (AC) that powers your home appliances. Now, that 8000W rating might have caught your attention, but remember, it represents the inverter"s capacity to handle peak power demands, not the continuous output.
