

Are NaS batteries suitable for climate conditions?

NAS batteries are suitable for a wide range of climate conditions, as this project in Dubai, UAE, shows. Image: NGK Insulators Ltd. Designed to discharge energy for 6 hours or longer, NAS battery units are scalable to hundreds of megawatt-hours.

Does BASF sell NaS batteries?

Today, BASF not only distributes the NAS battery worldwide, it is also working with NGK on the next generation of sodium-sulfur batteries, with product launches forthcoming in 2024. To learn more about NAS batteries, visit the BASF website here.

Are NaS batteries cost-competitive?

Besides the stability of raw materials pricing and their ideal technological fit for applications of 6 hours and beyond, another important aspect of the NAS battery's cost-competitiveness is low Opex: Arriving on site in containerised form, the systems are simple and quick to install.

Are NaS batteries safe?

NAS batteries have an elaborated safety concept which underwent extensive testing with third parties. That includes a work carried out by NGK with the Japanese Hazardous Material Safety Techniques Association and a safety audit conducted by TÜV Rheinland in 2019.

Should NaS batteries be co-located with hydrogen production?

Not surprisingly, NAS batteries have been chosen in several recent projects for co-location with hydrogen production. Across the globe, testing and certification of energy storage technologies from cell to system level according to UL9540A and UL1973 standards is becoming crucial for bankability.

Can NaS battery systems reduce maintenance costs?

The two companies co-developed the new product, which they claimed enables a smaller footprint of containerised systems per installation and reduces maintenance costs. Around 720MW/5,000MWh of NAS Battery systems have been deployed worldwide to date.

There is a large-scale project is in Rokkasho village, Japan (34 MW), and there are a number of commercially available products such as a 50 kW NaS battery systems that can discharge for 7 h at rated power [15,21]. When NaS batteries are used for short-term applications, the power can reach five times the rated power.

BASF Stationary Energy Storage GmbH, a wholly owned subsidiary of BASF, and NGK INSULATORS, LTD., a Japanese ceramics manufacturer, have released an advanced container-type NAS battery (sodium-sulfur battery) *1. The new product NAS MODEL L24 has been jointly developed by NGK and BASF and is characterised by a significantly lower ...

A megawatt-scale sodium-sulfur (NAS) battery demonstration project involving South Korea's largest electric utility has gone online. Operational start of the 1,000kWdc/5,800kWhdc NAS battery storage system made by NGK Insulators was announced by the Japanese manufacturer and designer of the technology last week.

NGK has scored a couple of other deals for the NAS BESS this year which Energy-Storage.news has reported: in late March it was revealed the technology will be used at Mongolia's first solar-plus-storage project, pairing 600kW / 3,600kWh of NAS batteries with a 5MW solar PV plant, supported by the Asian Development Bank.

NAS batteries allow fossil and biomass generators to be operated at a fixed output setting that minimizes fuel use and emissions. With NAS batteries result is a greener grid with lower operating costs and higher reliability.

NGK is a specialist in industrial ceramics by history, serving markets including car manufacturing. Its NAS battery is designed for medium to long-duration energy storage (LDES) and other stationary applications, with more than 5GWh deployed globally since its commercialisation more than 20 years ago.

NAS batteries have obtained the certification based on stationary storage battery safety standard UL 1973 (cell and module level) and a test report based on UL 9540A standard *, which is to verify batteries and storage battery systems fire risk, for confirming compliance with its evaluation criteria (cell, module and installation level) through ...
