

Born from the fiery heart of Piton de la Fournaise--one of the most active volcanoes in the world--Reunion is a lush and mountainous speck of land in the Indian Ocean. The island is a dramatic tapestry of peaks, cliffs, and sandy beaches in tropical coves.

Modern-day Réunion mixes French, West African, Indian, and Chinese influences. The cultural fusion is reflected in the island's hundreds of creole gardens, national dish of cari (a curry-like dish made of meat or seafood), and French-Colonial architecture, especially around the capital city of Saint-Denis.

It is an overseas region of France. The total area of the island is 2,512 km², of which 10 km² is water. The island has a coastline of 207 km. The maritime claims of Réunion include an exclusive economic zone of 200 nautical miles, and a territorial sea of 12 nautical miles (22 km).

Réunion has 24 municipalities organized into 5 agglomeration communities. From the point of view of the European Union,Réunion is considered an "outermost region." The positioning of La Réunion Island has given it a more or less important strategic role depending on the period.

In 2007, the city of Saint-Denis de La Réunion entrusted him with the artistic direction of its Saint-Denis Danses festival. The island is home to the regional conservatory of La Réunion, which has four teaching centres and was created in 1987 under the impetus of the then president of the region, Pierre Lagourgue.

The flora of La Réunion presents a great diversity of natural environments and species (up to 40 tree species/ha, compared to a temperate forest which has an average of 5/ha). This diversity is even more remarkable, but fragile, as it differs according to the environment (coastal, low, medium and high mountain).
