Meanwhile,nuclear power,which has long been a reliable and relatively low-carbon energy source for Taiwan,provides 7 percent of the nation's electricity and pumped storage accounts for 1.2 percent. Taiwan's extreme relianceon imported energy sources poses significant risks.

Taiwan's energy mix is imbalanced and heavily dependent on imports. As of last year, fossil fuels accounted for a staggering 81.8 percent of the nation's electricity generation.

Taiwan's energy security is a complex and serious issue, one that cannot be sacrificed to populist or activist sentiment. The future of Taiwan's energy mix must be determined through a rational, fact-based lens, with a clear focus on maintaining economic competitiveness and global leadership in high-tech industries.
